

GA Sea Survival Conference 2016

A one day conference on Saturday 2nd April 2016 at the The St George Hotel, Tees Valley Airport. This event is being organised in association with GASCo

Have you ever fancied flying your family over to France or the Chanel Islands?

Do you regularly fly over the Scottish Highlands or the Lake District?

Have you ever wondered what survival equipment you should carry, or how you would summon help should you get into difficulties?

Have you ever considered how you or your passengers would cope if you had to ditch, or how long you could survive in cold water?

GA Sea Survival Conference 2016 is a one day conference for pilots of light aircraft wishing to learn more about how to maximise both their and their family's chances of survival should something go wrong while flying over water (or inhospitable terrain).

Presentations will be given by experts in the field on the mechanics of ditching, how to summon help, the regulations and recommendations with regards to the carriage of survival equipment, survival techniques in the water, raft management, how the rescue effort is co-ordinated and Search and Rescue.
